Description

* (four stars) Everyone loves a good swine adventure. This one is the true story of how the most unpopular girl in school became one of the most notorious Oscar Meyer Wienermobile drivers of all time. More of a one-woman roast than an autobiography, Robin Gelfenbien invites the audience into the driver's seat of her painfully honest and hilariously self-deprecating tale of getting one's first real job after college. Unabashedly kitschy, her unusual coming-of-age journey is replete with embarrassing drunken snapshots and VHS-captured local-news clips. Visiting more than 20 U.S. states in the "Big Link," with a chauvinist pig of a sidekick, Gelfenbien finally learns how to let loose, be herself and beat the crap out of bullies. It takes her a while to reach the comedic meat of this jalopy tale, but once she gets cooking, be warned: No bun pun or wiener wisecrack goes unuttered in her nonstop romp through the back roads of 1990s America.—Julia Keefe-Chamberlain, Senior Account Manager
